

Your gift of £20 can buy an orangutan at Sepilok, a whole month's supply of food!

Nom, nom, nom!

In the wild, orangutan mothers would forage for food for themselves and for their baby. At the Sepilok Rehabilitation Centre, the babies are motherless and so rely on human carers to provide them with food. The orphans are fed foods, such as bananas, sugar cane, sweet potato, guava and watermelon. In the wild, orangutans will eat more than 400 different plant species, so their diet at Sepilok is kept intentionally limited and fairly bland to encourage the orangutans to go out on their own and forage for all of these tastier options.

Your gift of £20 will help a lot to keep the orangutans fed and healthy, while they are going through their rehabilitation programme.
